Then you can preview the video and generate HTML code to share with your audience on your website or social networks. I've just started my own and have to say the only down side is trying to generate your own content. It takes a lot of work for very little payout. For a newbie who can't even get a domain name and is looking to gain some experience this might be a really good option. My only other concern is that how do I know what videos will pay off and what won't. It's hard to tell what kind of results I'll get with my first video. I've been trying to make a blog for myself using Bluehost and the Aweber plugin, but when I try to send a test email to the test email address that you have included, my computer says that there is an error with the URL. I don't know if it is because I'm using my phone as a browser or if it is a bluehost issue. I have been trying to figure this out all night, and I was wondering if you or someone else could help me. As an affiliate marketer, you are not actually required to get the direct source of payment yourself. All you have to do is help others get the source of payment. You don't need to be a tax professional, or have an accountant's diploma to do that. The key thing you need to know about affiliate marketing is the key to making money is building relationships and trust. The money comes from the commissions on the sales the affiliates refer to your website. I was actually expecting to have to do some form of tabulating or organization before I started doing this. It was interesting to say the least. I was actually laughing because this is exactly the way I organized my iTunes music. There is a new way to look at things now, and a new way to earn an income. Anyhow, I'm no YouTube expert so there is still a lot to learn about this but it's amazing the potential to earn an income from it. I have a business on the side of making YouTube videos but I can't imagine not being able to live from this side income. Once you have that problem or need nailed, the next step is to validate that idea and make sure you've actually got customers who will pay for it. This means building a minimum viable product, getting objective feedback from real customers, incorporating updates, testing the market for demand, and 82157476af
